1 Survey of Automated Vulnerability Detection and Exploit

During the last ten years, code inspection for standard programming errors has largely been automated with static code analysis. During the next ten years, we believe we will see similar progress in automating testing, and specifically test generation, thanks to advances in program analysis, efficient constraint solvers and powerful computers.

Automated Software Testing Using Program Analysis paper is to acquire the basic concepts related to automated test data generation research. The different The different implementation techniques are described with their relative merits and demerits.
